The Decrease Made in the Assessed Valuation of Real Estate This Year is a Great Deal Less Than Last

The Board of Review having finished its work for the present year, it is interesting to note that the total real estate assessed valuation this year is considerably smaller than last year and the personal property assessed valuation is $17,111,470.

The following comparative figures are interesting:

Total assessed value realty, 1912—$13,290,620. 1911—$13,146,670.

Total assessed, Personal and Real, 1912—$17,111,470. 1911—$17,157,410.

Total Personal, 1912—$3,820,850. 1911—$4,010,740.

1912 Lake County Assessed values, total lots, $7,325,935. Total lands, $5,964,685. Total personal, $3,820,850. Railroad personal, $53,210. Telephone and telegraph, $169,715. Bank stock, $222,780. Total Assessed value $17,111,470.

Their conduct last year was of the best and on that score they can't be kept away, but their confiscating our choicest specimens of the finny tribe and the continual lowering of the waters of our lake is in our opinion sufficient provocation to warrant the issuing of an injunction prohibiting them from further transgressions. Let's hear from others on the subject.

All the above figures are one-third the full valuation, in other words, if one is to find out how much the total value of the various items is, he must multiply by three.

The board's figures this year show a total gain of $87,995 over assessors' figures, in other words, the reviewers have raised the total assessed valuation in the county that sum over what the assessors returned.

Below are interesting figures showing the number and value of different stock in the county.

OLD RESIDENT PASSES AWAY AT COLORADO

Mrs. John Cronkhite, nee Henrietta Aynsley, age 68 years, a resident of Lake county since birth, died at her home in Loveland, Colo., Saturday morning, Sept. 21.

The deceased is a sister of Mrs. Geo. Brown, of Waukegan, and is the wife of Lake County's best known merchants John Cronkhite, who for years was owner and manager of the largest elevator in northern Illinois. This elevator was erected by Mr. Cronkhite, at Rockfeller.

Five years ago Mrs. Cronkhite suffered an attack of inflammatory rheumatism. Her husband sold his interests in Lake county and moved to Colorado, where he hoped his wife would regain her health and strength. Soon after their arrival in Colorado, it was found that Mrs. Cronkhite was suffering from a cancer. Although everything was done, she died Saturday morning.

She was born at Diamond Lake, Ill., where she lived until her marriage.

She leaves to mourn her loving husband, one son, Frank, of Pittsburg, Pa., two daughters, Anna and Mrs. Ray Shadele, and one sister Mrs. Geo. Brown of Waukegan.

The remains arrived at Libertyville Wednesday morning and interred in the Diamond Lake Cemetery.

CHETEK KNOWS ALL THEM

Antioch Folks Get write up in Columns of the Chetek Alert

The following article under a heading of "Antioch At Large" appeared in last week's issue of the Chetek Alert: A. B. Johnson, Dr. Schwartz, Geo. Olecott, W. H. Tiffany, A. D. Gauger and James (Jim) McDougall arrived in Chetek by auto the forepart of the week with the expectation of exterminating the fowls of the air, the beast of the forests and likewise fish and creeping things of the sea, in the few short weeks that they will camp near the peaceful waters of the beautiful Lake Chetek.

The party is comprised of a dentist, to care for their teeth, a doctor to care for their bodily ailments and wounds, a dealer in powder, etc., to supply them in fire crackers and fish hooks and a dry goods man and a wet goods man— suffice to say, they will alternate in their treatments and last but not least, an editor to write their obituaries. Politically the lineup is as follows: A. B. a strong Taft man, George a Wilson man, Tiffany, Schwartz, Riley and Alex all Bull Moosers and when the charms of hunting pale, in our magic glass we see many hot political discussions warming the chill evening air and wafting like strains of sweet music out over the moonlight bosom of the bay.

Nearly all the same bunch were here last year and with the store house of knowledge gained at that time to draw from, this year we predict for them feats of prowess in the nimrod line such as has never before been recorded in the annals of our history. Their success as fishermen is a state wide marvel, but whether it is due to the soft voice of Riley, the persuasive manner of Johnson or the winning smile of Tiffany none can say.

Their conduct last year was of the best and on that score they can't be kept away, but their confiscating our choicest specimens of the finny tribe and the continual lowering of the waters of our lake is in our opinion sufficient provocation to warrant the issuing of an injunction prohibiting them from further transgressions. Let's hear from others on the subject.

SUPERVISORS TAKE STRAW VOTE FOR PRES.

The Lake County Board of Supervisors Wednesday afternoon took a straw vote on their choice for president and the result was as follows: Roosevelt 11, Taft 5, and Wilson 4.

Chairman Clarke stated that he has a father-in-law who always likes to be with the winning side, but says that the situation this time has caused him to be somewhat perplexed so that he does not yet know which way to vote. He said he intended to take home a record of the vote so that his wife's father might know how to vote.

Chairman Chittenden Wednesday afternoon gave his report to the board on the matter of the county building and operating a tubercular colony at the county farm for poor patients. His committee found that for $4,000 a suitable two-story building and basement, 24x28 could be erected. The committee was not to recommend the adoption of their plans, but the general feeling of the board was they would decide to order the building erected. The building would be erected not far from the other county buildings on the poor farm in case the plans carry.

YOUNG BRIDE IS STRICKEN WITH TYPHOID FEVER

Inexorable fate, which is no respecter of persons, chose to strike down with typhoid fever Mrs. Barbara Ebert Nagle while she was spending her honeymoon with her husband to whom she was married a week ago.

Everything on the matrimonial sea went smoothly for a few days until sickness loomed on the horizon. At first it was thought that it was nothing serious but on Monday a physician was called in and the illness was diagnosed as typhoid fever and the advice was given that the young woman should be taken to the McAllister hospital at Waukegan where she could receive the best possible care. On Monday night, exactly one week after her wedding ceremony she was placed in the hospital.

ELECTRIC ROAD IS SOLD

The Electric Road Was Sold
For the Sum of $1,650,000
To Jacob Newman

NOT SOLD TO TRUNK ROAD

The Road Will be Re-organized in Two Weeks and the Management of the Road Will be Same as Former Years

The properties of the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric railroad, south of the Wisconsin state line were sold Wednesday morning by Special Master E. D. Morrison of Chicago, appointed by the Federal Court to Jacob Newman, representing the bond holders of the road, for $1,650,000. The price paid by the bond holders of the road is considered very cheap by the financiers who were in Waukegan. Mr. Newman was the only bidder for the Illinois properties.

It was expected by the large crowd gathered at the front of the court house Wednesday morning, that the road would bring at least $5,000,000 and when it was sold to Mr. Newman for slightly over a million and a half, there was genuine surprise. Mr. Newman said: "I consider the price paid for the road very reasonable. We will start our plans for the reorganization of the road at once and should have them entirely completed within three weeks at the most."

When asked whether the road would be a part of any other electric company Mr. Newman replied positively that it was not. "The road will be as in the past—separate from everything," Mr. Newman also stated that as soon as the reorganization had been made complete, that the company would again approach the city on the franchise from the city of Waukegan.

Among those who were there for the sale of the road were: Mr. Morrison, Jacob Newman, attorney for the bond holders, and buyer of the road, Floyd Cinch, owner of the Hotel Sherman of Chicago and chairman of the re-organization committee; Frank McCullough, attorney for the Illinois half of the road; Losing-Resenthal, representing the Wisconsin bondholders, and Receiver W. O. Thompson. It was expected that Mr. Thompson would bid on the road, for his private property, but he did not.

The part of the road, commonly, called the "West Line," the Libertyville division and the selection of the road running to the state line on the north were sold for $50,000. The road from Evanston to Waukegan sold for $1,600,000. The price on both sections was below the expectations of the sellers.

From Waukegan the company of Chicago men boarded a special car on the Chicago & Milwaukee electric to go to Racine, where Wisconsin end of the C. & M. E. R. R. was bought by Jacob Newman, representing Smith & Ford, the bond holders of the road.

No Room.

"Bertie," said the hospitable hostess at a Sunday school treat, "won't you eat some more cookies?"

"I can't. I'm full!" sighed Bertie.

"Well, then, put some in your pockets."

"I can't. They're full, too," was the regretful answer.—Youth's Companion.

"I saw George in the city yesterday and he didn't see me. So I kept watching him. He had a seat in a crowded subway car. At least two score women, most of them pretty as a picture, came in and passed by him or stood in front of him. And George never looked at the one of them; he was deeply interested in his paper."—Philadelphia Times.

TOWNSHIP QUESTION NOT SETTLED

Twenty-nine Have Withdrawn
Their Names From the Petition

FINAL VOTE WED. OCT., 2

The Township Fight Has Been Going on For Some Time, But, as Yet Neither Side Has Gained Their Point

The Board of Supervisors met again at Waukegan Wednesday to decide on the Lake Villa Township question. No decision was rendered, but the matter will be taken up again Wednesday Oct. 2, when the final vote will be taken.

Twenty-nine of those who signed the original petition for the creation of a new township, at Lake Villa, have withdrawn their names from the list, after the first report of the committee was made favorably on the matter of creating a new township.

If all the objections of those opposed to the creation of the township are sustained, the petition will lack one name of the required number, three-fourths. If the callings of those who are demanding a new township are considered as the foundation there will be majority of fifteen.

The committee on the Lake Villa township matter Wednesday morning gave their report to the board of Supervisors, after a deliberation of over two weeks, recommending that the township, for which the residents of that district have been praying for the past eight months, be created.

The committee has carefully inquired into the matter and has found the petitioners were acting entirely according to law and that they have met all requirements of the law.

The following brief summary of their report, as given to the board Wednesday.

First—The territory in question comprises more than sixteen squares.

Second—The territory contains more than 200 legal voters required by law. To-wit: It contains 292 legal voters.

Third—More than the required three-fourths of the resident voters in the district signed the petition; namely, 224.

Fourth—No portion of the towns of Avon, Antioch or Grant will be made smaller than sixteen squares if the proposed township is organized, and will have the 200 voters required by law.

Fifth—That notice of the final action of said petition was posted in 22 conspicuous places in the said towns sixty days before the 11th of September 1912.

Sixth—The petition was duly published in a secular paper of general circulation three different times.

Seventh—No incorporated towns or villages will be divided if the petition is granted.

And the Simplest.

Deputation of Creditors—We've come to tell you that we are quite willing to make as easy an arrangement with you as possible.

Debtor—The easiest arrangement you could make would be all to go away again.

Maybe She Liked Coffee.

Kent Cooper, a newspaper man, said he was in a restaurant in Chicago recently when he observed, sitting at the table next him, an evidently well-to-do young man and a young woman, the latter of whom showed signs of not being accustomed to the restaurants of the class she was then patronizing.

When the remnants of the dessert were removed from before the pair, the waiter stood at attention for the final order.

"I think you may bring me a cigar and a demi tasse," said the man.

"I don't care for a cigar," giggled the girl, "but you may bring me one of the other things and a cup of coffee."

TOM THUMB WEDDING

An Entertainment Consisting of Fifty Children at the M. E. Church on Oct 11

The Tom Thumb Wedding entertainment, which was postponed, will be given in the M. E. church Friday evening October 11th. About 50 children between 2½ and 10 years of age will take part. They will be trained by Miss May Burnworth who has directed this entertainment many hundred times and has met with wonderful success. The entertainment has been given as many as four times in the same place and always to large audiences.

The entertainment lasts one and one-half hours and is one continuous performance the entire time, interspersed throughout with songs by the little people. For instance, Grandma Thumb sings a solo, 'I Cannot Sing the Old Songs,' and Grandpa follows with 'I've Grown So Used to You.' Later Grandpa Midget sings 'Silver Threads Among the Gold.' At different parts of the evening, four cousins of the bride sing, 'O Promise Me,' 'Some Day,' 'I'd Love to Live in Loveland,' and 'When You and I Were Young Maggie.'

The preacher has a catchy little ceremony—not in any sense like the real one—but a pretty, catchy little piece, made up for the occasion. On the whole the entertainment is one continuous round of such clean, wholesome fun as only children can furnish, and everyone goes away refreshed and rested from witnessing it.

The characters are: Bride and groom, best man and maid of honor, four bridesmaids, two ushers, aunts of groom and cousins of bride, minister and wife, fathers and mothers of the bride and groom, two grandfathers and two grandmothers, two sisters of the bride and bachelor friend, several couples of guests, twelve waiters and six couples flower girls.

This entertainment will be given but one night, don't fail to come. The director will be here for several days to train the little ones.

NAVAL TRAINING STATION WILL START INQUIRY

This week the court of inquiry will take the matter of the deaths of the eleven naval training station lads will start its inquiry at the training station. The board is composed of these men, all officers at the station: Lieut. London, judge advocate of the board. Lieut. Com Smith, Lieut. Carter, and Dr. Koles.

This court will minutely inquire into every detail and circumstance of the tragedy and events leading up to it and make a report to the navy department. They will go into more careful inquiry than the board of inquest did, the work of the latter being merely to find out that the men died from drowning, probably accidental. The court of inquiry will ascertain all the facts and place the blame if there is any, on the man or men who is found at fault. This court leaves no stone unturned to get at the exact fact.

MRS. MATILDA CRAGG DIES OF TUBERCULOSIS

Mrs. Matilda Cragg died on Monday noon at the home of her sister Mrs. E. Thayer and Mrs. Cragg's former home, at Lake Villa. The cause of her death being tuberculosis.

She came back here from Evanston last spring, in order to die at her old home. Knowing that she could not live much longer. She has been at the tuberculosis colony at Waukegan for a few weeks. She leaves a husband, three daughters and two sons, besides an aged mother and several brothers and sisters.

The funeral was held Wednesday, Rev. Lowrie officiating and burial in Angola cemetery. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

WILL SOON INVESTIGATE MILK PRICES

Different Milk Associations are in Serious Situation as to Low Prices For Milk

$1.70 PER 100 IS OFFERED

Last Year the Farmers Got $1.79 Per 100, and Are Working For That Price This Year

Federal investigation of the so-called "milk trust" will be asked by the Chicago Milk Producers' Association with which most of the Kenosha county producers are affiliated.

Last Saturday the Borden company announced a reduction of 9 1-6 cents a hundred pounds in the price paid the farmers for their product. This was followed by an announcement on behalf of the farmers that a federal investigation would be asked.

The milk producers had asked an increase of nineteen cents per hundred pounds and the announcement that a 6 1-6 cent cut had been made aroused them to immediate action. According to the farmers, milk at the present time is produced at a greater expense than ever before. Feed, they assert is so high. Cattle have increased in price and laborers for dairy farms can scarcely be had at any price. The milk ordinance recently passed by the Chicago city council, they say, has increased the cost of producing milk for the Chicago market more than ten per cent.

"The announcement of the new price came as a shock to all the producers of milk," said James F. Grier, secretary of the milk producers' association. "There has never been a time when the cost of milk production was so high."

Under the new city ordinance the farmer must keep the flanks of his cattle clipped. He must reduce the temperature of the milk to sixty degrees, immediately after milking. This means larger quantities of ice and added expense. Unless the companies pay more for the milk the producers will be forced to sell their cattle and go out of business.

The price which were posted by the Borden company, follow:

October	$1.60
November	1.75
December	1.80
January	1.75
February	1.70
March	1.60

Average, $1.70 per 100 pounds.

The average price last year was $1.79 100 pounds.

Libertyville Men Hold Milk Meeting

Some forty odd milk producers met at Libertyville town hall Monday evening in an adjourned meeting from last Tuesday, Chairman A. Horton, presiding. The meeting was called for the purpose of deciding on the price per 100 pounds of milk for the next six months, beginning October 1. The committee appointed at the last meeting to confer with Yore Brothers, who operate a bottling plant at Libertyville made the report that Yore Brothers offered $1.70 per 100 lbs. Last year this company paid $1.79 per 100. No apparent cause for the decrease in price was offered. The price corresponds with that offered by Borden, in fact, the price was made after Borden advertised his rates.

HAS BEEN AN ASSESSOR FOR THIRTY-NINE YEARS

J. A. Hoffman, assessor at Newport township, states that he has served as assessor for more years than states previously. He states that he has been assessor for the past thirty-nine years. His work several days ago was commented upon by the Board as being more thorough than that of any assessor in the county. As far as can be ascertained, he holds the record for being the man who has served the longest as assessor in any one township in the county if not the state. His repeated re-election to office seems to indicate that he is satisfactory to the people of his township as well as to reviewing board.—Waukegan Gazette.

SERIAL STORY

The FLYING MERCURY

By Eleanore M. Ingram
Author of "The Game and the Candle"
Illustrations by RAY WALTERS

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens on Long Island, near New York city, where Miss Emily French, a relative of Ethan French, manufacturer of the celebrated "Mercury" automobile, loses her way. The car has stopped and her cousin, Dick French, is too muddled with drink to direct it. They meet another car which is run by a professional racer named Lestrage. The latter fixes up the French car and directs Miss French how to proceed homeward. Ethan French has disintegrated his son, who has disappeared. He informs Emily plainly that he would like to have her marry Dick, who is a good-natured but irresponsible fellow. It appears that a partner of Ethan French wanting an expert to race with the "Mercury" at auto events, has engaged Lestrage, and at the French factory Emily encounters the young man. They refer pleasantly to their meeting when Dick comes along and recognizes the young racer. Dick likes the way Lestrage ignores their first meeting when he appeared to a disadvantage. Lestrage tells Emily that he will try to educate her indifferent cousin as an automobile expert. Dick undertakes his business schooling under the tutelage of Lestrage.

"Well?" Dick asked last night. "Have Mr. Bailey do nothing at all," was the deliberate reply. "There is an etiquette of subordination. I believe this is Mr. French's factory. I've done my part and we'll think no more of the matter. I may be wrong but I am more than grateful to Miss French."

"That's all you're going to do?" "Yes. I wish you would not sit there."

"I'm tired; I won't fall in, and I want to think. We've been a lot together this spring, Lestrage; I don't like this business about the steering gear. Do you go down to the beach tomorrow?"

"Tonight. Tomorrow I must put in practicing on the track. I would have been down today if there had not been so much to do here. Are you coming with me, or not until the evening of the start?"

Dick stirred uncomfortably. "I don't want to come at all, thank you. I saw you race once."

"You had better get used to it," Lestrage quietly advised. "The day may come when there is no one to take your place. This factory will be yours and you will have to look after your own interests. I wish you would come down and represent the company at this race."

"I haven't the head for it." "I do not agree with you."

Their eyes met in a long regard. Here, in the crowded room of workers, the ceaseless uproar shut in their conversation with a walled completeness of privacy.

"I'm not sure whether you know it, Lestrage, but you've got me all stirred up since I met you," the young man confessed plaintively. "You're different from other fellows and you've made me different. I'd rather be around the factory than anywhere else I know, now. But honestly I like you too well to watch you race."

"I want you to come."

One of the men with a vessel of white, heaving molten metal was trying to pass through the narrow aisle. Dick broke his sentence to rise in hasty avoidance, and his foot slipped in a puddle of oil on the floor.

It was so brief in happening that only the workman concerned saw the accident. As Dick fell backward, Lestrage sprang forward and caught him, fairly snatching him from the greedy teeth. There was the rending of fabric, a gasping sob from Dick, and reeling from the recoil Lestrage was sent staggering against a flying wheel next in line.

The workman set down his burden with a reckless endangering further trouble, active too late.

"Mr. Lestrage!" he cried.

But Lestrage had already recovered himself, his right arm crossed with a scorched and bleeding bar where it had touched the glittering wheel, and the two young men were standing opposite each other in safety.

"You are not hurt?" was the first question.

"I? I ought to be, but I'm not. Come to a surgeon, Lestrage—Oh, you told me not to sit there!"

Lestrage glanced down at the surface wound, then quickly back at the two pallid faces.

"Go on to your work, Peters," he directed. "I'm all right." And as the man slowly obeyed, "Now will you take my advice and come to the race with me, French?"

"Race? You'd race with that arm?" "Yes. Are you coming with me?" Shaken and tremulous, Dick passed a damp hand across his forehead.

"I think you're mad to stand talking here. Come to the office, for heaven's sake. And I'd be ground up there, if you hadn't caught me," he looked toward the jaws sullenly shredding and shredding a strip of cloth from his sleeve. "I'll do anything you want."

"Will you?" Lestrage flashed quickly. He swung back his head with the resolute setting of expression the other knew so well, his eyes brilliant with a resolve that took no heed of physical discomfort. "Then give me your word that you'll stick to your work here. That is my fear; that the change in you is just a mood you'll tire of some day. I want you to stand up to your work and not drop out disquieted."

"I will," said Dick, subdued and earnest. "I couldn't help doing it—your arm—"

Lestrage impatiently dragged out his handkerchief and wound it around the cut.

"Go on."

"I can't help keeping on; I couldn't go back now. You've got me awake. No one else ever tried, and I was having a good time. It began with liking you and thinking of all you did, and feeling funny alongside of you." He paused, struggling with Anglo-Saxon shyness. "I'm awfully fond of you, old fellow."

The other's gray eyes warmed and cleared. Smiling, he held out his left hand.

"It's mutual," he assured. "It isn't playing the game to trap you while you are upset like this. But I don't believe you'll be sorry. Come find some one to tie this up for me; I can't have it stiff tomorrow."

But in spite of his professed haste, Lestrage stopped at the head of the stairs and went back to recover some small object lying on the floor beneath a pool of chilling metal. When he rejoined Dick, it was to linger yet a moment to look back across the teeming room.

"It's worth having, all this," he commented, with the first touch of sadness the other ever had seen in him. "Don't throw it away, French."

There is usually a surgeon within reach of a factory. When Mr. French passed out to the cart where Emily waited, he passed Dick and the village physician entering. The elder gentleman put on his glasses to survey his nephew's white face.

"An accident?" he inquired.

The casual curiosity was sufficiently exasperating, and Dick's nerves were badly gone.

"Nothing worth mentioning," he snapped. "Just that I nearly fell into the machinery and Lestrage has done up his arm pulling me out. That's all."

"That isn't tight enough, Doc."

And he hurried the doctor on without further parley of excuse.

Lestrage was in the room behind the office, smoking one of Bailey's cigars and listening to that gentleman's vigorous remarks concerning managers who couldn't keep out of their own machinery, the patient not having considered it worth while to explain Dick's share in the mischance. An omission which Dick himself promptly remedied in his anxious contrition.

Later, when the arm was being swathed in white linen, its owner spoke to his companion of the morning:

"I hope you didn't annoy Miss French with this trifling matter, as you came in."

"I didn't speak to her at all, only to my uncle."

"Very good."

Something in the too-indolent tone roused Dick's usually dormant observation. Startled, he scrutinized Lestrage.

"Is that why you bothered yourself with me?" he stammered. "Is that why?"

"Shut up!" warned Lestrage forcibly and inelegantly. "That isn't tight enough, Doc. You know I'm experienced at this sort of thing, and I'm going to use this arm."

But Dick was not to be silenced in his new enlightenment. When the surgeon momentarily turned away, he leaned nearer, his plump face grim.

"If I brace up, it won't be for Emily, but for you, Darling Lestrage," he whispered viciously. "She don't want me and I don't want her, that way. I've got over that. And, and—oh, confound it, I'm sorry, old man!"

"Shut up!" said Lestrage again. But though Dick's very sympathy unconsciously showed the hopeless chasm between the racing driver and Miss French, the hurt did not cloud the cordial smile Lestrage sent to mitigate his command.

CHAPTER VI.

Emily first heard the full story of the accident that evening, when Dick sat opposite her on the veranda and gave the account in frank anxiety and dejection.

"nine o'clock train," he added in conclusion. "Tomorrow morning he'll spend practicing on the track, and tomorrow evening at 6 the race starts. And Lestrage starts crippled because I am a clumsy idiot. He laughs at me, but—he'd do that anyhow."

"Yes," agreed Emily. "He would do that anyhow." Her eyes were wide and terrified, the little hands she clasped in her lap were quite cold. "I wish, I wish he had never come to this place."

"Oh, you do?" Dick said oddly. "Maybe he will, too, before he gets through with us. We're a nasty lot, we Frenches; a lot of blue-blooded snobs without any red blood in us. Are you going to say good-by to me? I won't be home until it's over."

She looked at him, across the odorous dusk slowly silencing the moon rose.

"You are going to be with him?"

Dick smoothed his leggings betwixt standing up, surveying his strict motor costume with a gloomy pride not to be concealed.

"Yes; I'm representing our company. Lestrage might want some backing if any disputes turned up. Uncle Ethan nearly had a fit when Bailey told him what I was going to do; he called me Richard for the first time in my life. I guess I'll be some good yet, if every one except Lestrage did think I was a chump."

"I am very sure you will," she answered gently. "Good-by, Dick; you look very nice."

When he reached the foot of the steps, her voice recalled him, as she stood leaning over the rail.

"Dick, you could not make him give it up, not race this time?"

He started up at her white figure. "No, I could not. Don't you suppose I tried?"

"I suppose you did," she admitted, and went back to her seat.

The June night was very quiet. Once a sleepy bird stirred in the honeysuckle vines and chirped through the dark. Far below the throb of a motor passed down the track, dying away again to leave silence. Suddenly Emily French hid her face on the arm of her chair and the tears overflowed.

There was no consciousness of time while that inarticulate passion of dread spent itself. But it was nearly half an hour later when she started up at the echo of a light step on the gravel path, dashing her handkerchief across her eyes.

It was incredible, but it was true: Lestrage himself was standing before her at the foot of the low stairs, the moonlight glinting across his uncovered bronze head and bright, clear face.

"I beg pardon for trespassing, Miss French," he said. "But your cousin tells me he has been saying a great deal of nonsense to you about this race, and that you were so very good as to feel some concern regarding it. Really, I had to run up and set that right; I couldn't leave you to be annoyed by Mr. French's nerves. Will you forgive me?"

Like sun through a mist his blithe voice cleaved through her distress. Before the tranquil sanity of his regard, her painted terrors suddenly showed as the artificial canvas scenes of a stage, unreal, untrue.

"It was like you to come," she answered, with a shaking sigh that was half sob. "I was frightened, yes."

"There is no cause. A dozen other men take the same chance as Rupert and I; the driver who alternates with me, for instance. This is our life."

"Your arm—"

"Is well enough." He laughed a little. "You will see many a bandaged arm before the twenty-four hours are up; few of us finish without a scratch or strain or blister. This is a man's game, but it's not half so destructive as football. You wished me good luck for the Georgia race; will you repeat the honor before I go back to French?"

"I wish you," she said unsteadily, "every kind of success, now and always. You saved Dick today—of all else you have done for him and for me I have not words to speak. But it made it harder to bear the thought of your hurt and risk from the hurt, when I knew that I had sent Dick there, who caused it."

Some London Statistics.

In a volume of more than 600 pages the London County Council presents statistics of much interest. The metropolitan district, made up of the cities, towns and boroughs which comprise the real London, had a population of 7,252,963 in 1910, occupying an area of a little more than 692 square miles. Only 14.8 per cent. of the total number of inhabitants, or 670,110 persons, were entitled to vote in parliamentary elections, and of these 74.6 per cent. went to the polls in the election of December, 1910, a falling off from the 84.3 per cent. which voted in January of that year. In 1909 there were 116,559 births, a decline since 1881 from 24.3 to 24.2 a thousand of population. The death rate fell from 19.8 in 1900 to 14.7 a thousand. Phthisis and pneumonia were responsible for more than 13,000 deaths.

More Curious Than Comfortable. The Mashukulumbi natives of northwestern Rhodesia have a most wonderful head-dress, which is made of cuttings of hair from other boys' heads mixed with mud and grease. Sometimes these topknots are studded with all sorts of curiosities, such as beads, bits of broken crockery, brass paper-fasteners (the latter generally stolen by the native messengers from the native commissioner's office), feathers, and so forth. The result forms one of the most curious costumes in the world.

FACTORS OF PROFIT IN THE DAIRY HERD

By W. L. GAINES, University of Illinois.

Profit From Herd	Sum of Profits From Each Cow	Value of Product (Market) Minus Cost of Product	Cost of Keep (Feed, Labor, etc.) Divided by Amount of Product	Capacity of Cow and Opportunity	Capacity of Cow (Inherited Dairy Ability) and Opportunity (Feed, Care, Etc.)
		Times

The above chart furnishes an outline of the factors which enter into the profit made from many herds of cows where the dairy product is the chief source of income from the herd. In the case of pure bred, dual purpose or beef herds the calves may take a more important place so that the amount of milk produced is not the only consideration in returns from the cow.

It is quite evident that the profit divided from the herd is made up of the profits from each cow separately. If all cows in the herd gave the same or nearly the same profit, it would be as well to say that the herd profit equals the profit per cow times the number of cows, and that to secure a greater profit a larger herd is necessary. The latter is a somewhat common view, but a good one, since the net returns from different cows in the herd varies to a great extent. Size of the herd is, of course, a factor in the total profit made from it—a 50-cow dairy will plainly give larger returns than a 10-cow dairy. Yet in either herd there will very likely be a greater range of profit between the better and poorer cows than there is in numbers between the larger and smaller herds, and this fact is not at all plain to many men.

The factor of the value of the product or the market available is a very important one to be considered before going into the dairy business. It requires rather careful management to their production is not the same. This difference is due to the cow herself, and is without the control of the owner. His only recourse is to select. Cows of equal dairy merit will produce considerably different amounts of milk, but their production of butter fat will be nearly the same. The capacity of a cow is, therefore, best measured by the amount of fat she produces, and selection should be based on this. Culling on the basis of the amount of fat produced is one of the most rapid methods of bettering an unimproved herd, if the rejected cows can be replaced by better ones. Under some conditions an experienced man can buy good cows to better advantage than to raise them, but under most farm conditions a supply is best obtained by breeding consistently to a dairy bred bull.

Large capacity is a special advantage in permitting crowding when prices are favorable. If the market is high enough to give a profit of 30 cents, it is a decided advantage to have a cow that can make 50 pounds of fat a month instead of one whose limit is 30 pounds, even though the former did not produce more cheaply per pound.

Census figures show that in 1910 there was $73,724,074 worth of farm machinery in the state of Illinois. There ought to be a lot of sheds to house $73,000,000 worth of property, but it is safe to say that the only shelter that a goodly portion of it has is the friendly covering of an old tree. Economy means management without loss or waste. Action or system cannot be lauded as enjoying economical perfection, and we cannot call agricultural production economical, unless in our methods we have prevented these leaks which allow deplorable loss. In other words, it is good economy to build farm implement sheds.

Country Life Lectures.

A course of lectures on country life problems will be one of the features of the work of the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois for the next year. The lectures will deal with the problems of the farm, duties of good citizenship, and social, economic and educational work in rural communities. They will be given by Dean Eugene Davenport and other members of the faculty; one lecture will be given each week. All first year students will be required to attend.

FEEDING TO PRODUCE EGGS

In Addition to Variety of Grains Milk of Any Kind Is Favored—Cost of Keeping.

Though many people advise against it, I like to feed my hens by the hopper method mainly. The hoppers are large enough to hold about 100 pounds each, and in different hoppers I put oats, bran and meat-scrap, wheat and barley, says a writer in the Farm and Fireside. I tried a hopper with corn, but found they ate 300 pounds of corn to every 100 pounds of wheat and 25 pounds of oats. Wheat, oats and barley being the best egg-producing grains, the corn hopper was closed and the proportion of the different grains then consumed was four parts wheat, two parts barley, one part oats and a little bran and meat-scrap. This comes pretty near the "lay or bust" ration given out by the Oregon experiment station. Milk, whether skimmed, sour or butter, is a valuable addition to any ration. In addition to the grain they get from the hopper, corn is fed at night, and while this may appear peculiar, having other grains before them all day, the hens do find room for no small amount of that grain which they like best. The only green feed they get is cabbage. While grit and oyster shells is supplied, I value the coal and wood ashes most highly. The dust is added to their dusting pen, and the small unburned pieces of coal are relished by the hens more than either the grit or shell.

Some good poultry folks make three to six dollars profit from each hen (on paper), but I got close to one dollar over feed, and considering the fact that little time was spent in caring for them, they paid better than any other stock kept on the farm. The hen that lays 150 eggs a year is a rare one, though it is something all breeders should strive to produce. A good flock of hens will average 75 to 100 eggs a year, and if a portion of them are laid during the winter, it is safe to place the average price per egg at two cents, making $1.50 to $2 as the value of eggs from each hen. Having kept a record of all the feed consumed during the year for my 400 hens, the cost of feed for each hen can be placed pretty close to 75 or 80 cents.

A HIDDEN DANGER

It is a duty of the kidneys to rid the blood of uric acid, an irritating poison that is constantly forming inside.

When the kidneys fail, uric acid causes rheumatic attacks, headache, dizziness, gravel, urinary troubles, weak eyes, dropsy or heart disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys fight off uric acid—bringing new strength to weak kidneys and relief from backache and urinary ills.

A Missouri Case. J. H. J. Linnebur, 808 Madison St., St. Charles, Mo., says: "I was miserable from backache, pain in my head, dizziness and a sensitiveness in the small of my back. My ordinary housework was a burden. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected these troubles and removed annoyance caused by the kidney secretions. I have much to thank Doan's Kidney Pills for."

Different. Albert J. Beveridge said in Chicago of a corrupt boss: "He's very virtuous—oh, very virtuous."

"A millionaire once went to him and said: 'I want to get to the senate. Will you sell me your support?'"

"No, sir!" the boss answered, striking himself upon the chest. "No, sir! I'm a free-born American citizen and I'll sell my support to no man."

"But," said the millionaire, blandly, as he drew out his checkbook and fountain pen, "but, if you won't sell me your support, perhaps you'll rent it to me for the term of this campaign?"

"Now you're talking," said the boss in a mollified tone.

CAREFUL DOCTOR. Prescribed Change of Food Instead of Drugs.

It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines.

There are some truly scientific physicians among the present generation who recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated, regardless of the value to their pockets. Here's an instance:

"Four years ago I was taken with severe gastritis and nothing would stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation."

"I heard of a doctor who had a summer cottage near me—a specialist from N. Y.—and as a last hope, sent for him."

"After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more. I kept at it and gradually got so I could eat and digest three teaspoonfuls. Then I began to have color in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered."

"Now after a year on Grape-Nuts I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew fleshy and strong on this food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

HOW ARAB PRIZES HIS MARE
"Foundation of Wealth is a Mare; Bring Forth a Mare," is One of Their Sayings.

The Arab's regard for his mare is often expressed in sayings that are short and very much to the point, as for instance: "The foundation of wealth is a mare; bring forth a mare." "The greatest blessings are a wise wife and a fruitful mare."

As the Arabs themselves are divided into tribes and sub-tribes, the same system is adopted in regard to the strain of their horses' breed. In fact, the breeding is carried on in the same manner as laid down in the Koran for the Mohammedan marriages. This is one of the chief factors giving rise to the high quality of the pure bred Arab horse.

"Thoroughbred mares are never sold under any conditions, and instances have been known," says Pierre Ponadine in "Life in the Moslem East" "when five and six and ten thousand pounds have been refused; for often such mares that are too old for riding are still kept for breeding purposes."

In olden times stealing a mare was punishable by death. Sheikhs own one or more pure bred mares, according to their position and means, but it is often the case that among the less well to do people a mare is owned by several, the shares being clearly defined and division of costs made according to detailed and often complicated laws. Sometimes one family owns "one leg," while a richer man claims "two legs," etc.

The system of owning a mare in shares is found among certain Arabs in Turkish Arabia and sometimes in the city of Bagdad itself, if any one is fortunate enough to get hold of a half-bred mare.—Tit-Bits.

GAUDY FUNERALS IN BURMAH
With Ballet and Band the Rich Burmese Are Paraded to Their Tombs.

They have gorgeous funerals in Rangoon, the capital of Burmah, India. When a rich Burman is buried, for instance, the funeral procession might be compared to the street parade of some circus. First comes a kind of ballet of Burmese in bright colored silks, dancing the wildest kinds of contortions, anything but graceful. Next there is the hearse, drawn by several black horses. Oddly enough, in some cases it will be a huge black English hearse with attendants in black and white girdles, instead of the usual gaudy Burmese hearse, with its models of dancers and race horses. Following this a brass band will blare out some lively tune, to which the ballet can dance, the whole being about as appropriate to the solemnities of such an occasion as would be a dirge to enliven a bridge-visit party.

Stringing along after the band will be a mile, more or less, of ox-carts with quaint tops of colored matting, each crowded with "gay mourners" who are provided with no end of refreshments. A big Burman in brilliant pink silk and carrying a large fan usually plays the part of master of ceremonies, his chief duty being to see that all are happy. As companion he will have a muscular chap bearing a huge case of bottles containing drinks for the whole party. Luckily, since dead men tell no tales, it is also true that they find no fault; and so these grotesque funerals are never interrupted by the box occupants in whose honor the spectacles are arranged.

Model Husband.
Wife—I saw the loveliest lace spreads today, only two dollars and a half, and I wanted them awfully, but I knew you wished to economize and so I didn't get them.

Anything which adds to your happiness and brings gladness to your eyes, anything which lightens your domestic cares and glides the lowering clouds, anything which borders with sweet flowers the thorny paths of duty and appeals pleasantly to your esthetic nature, making life more worth living, home a paradise, you are welcome, doubly welcome, my angel, if it doesn't cost more than two dollars and a half.

Resolutions of Respect

Resolutions adopted by Russel Camp No. 1096 M. W. A. in memory of Geo. T. Crittenden.

Whereas: God in His wisdom has taken our neighbor and brother Geo. T. Crittenden from our camp and from earth and we as members of Russell camp No. 1096 M. Therefore be it Resolved, That this camp extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and commend them to Him who will guide them wisely.

115 SINK WITH SHIP

RUSSIAN STEAMER OBNSKA GOES DOWN FOLLOWING COLLISION IN DWINA RIVER.

CRASH OCCURS DURING FOG

Only Thirty-Five of Hundred and Fifty Passengers Saved—Huge Craft Plunges to Bottom as Boats Are Lowered.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 25.—The steamer Obnoska was sunk on Monday with the loss of 115 lives, in collision with another steamer in the Dwina river, according to a dispatch received here.

There were 150 passengers on the Obnoska at the time of the disaster. The dispatch says the vessels met in a fog and so quickly did the Obnoska settle that only thirty-five passengers and members of the crew were rescued.

The Dwina river is wide and swift where the collision occurred.

As the boats struck, passengers on the Obnoska rushed up on the decks. Many of the passengers were ignorant peasants and they struggled frantically with officers and sailors, who tried to marshal them in line for debarkation in the few life boats which were carried. Part of these boats had been wrecked in the collision and were useless.

As the first boat was loosened from its davits the big steamer listed and plunged to its grave.

Only a few passengers and sailors had opportunity to jump into the water and save their lives. Boats from the steamer which hit the Obnoska picked up the few survivors.

SCHOOL HEAD IS INDICTED

N. C. Dougherty of Peoria, Ill., Named in True Bill—Woman Sees Errors in Dream.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 25.—A young woman's dream led to an investigation, the sum total of which is that Newton C. Dougherty, former head of the city schools here, may be brought to stand trial on indictments against him which were voted by the grand jury on Monday.

Fifteen indictments against Dougherty were returned by the grand jury, which has been in session three weeks. The true bill charge forgery, the embezzlement charge, which it was said the evidence found warranted, having become outlawed. Judge Worthington fixed the bond at $300 each, or a total of $12,000.

Miss Lillian Adams, private secretary to State's Attorney Scholes, was the young woman who had the dream. For several days she has been directing a corps of assistants in the compilation of the blank indictments, and Sunday night she dreamed that the indictments were faulty.

JUDGE HUTTON WILL NOT RUN

Darrow Jurist Withdraws Name in Race for Re-Election to Bench in Los Angeles, Cal.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 25.—Judge George H. Hutton of the Los Angeles superior court, who presided at the recent Darrow bribery trial, withdrew from the race for re-election on Monday, because his health had become affected by the months of strain of the trial. With the termination of his duties on the bench, Judge Hutton will head an expedition of investigation and exploration into New Mexico and Arizona for the American Archaeological society, for the purpose of studying the evidences of an ancient irrigation system of prehistoric races in that section.

Incipient Revolt in Town in China Is Started by Defiant Chief of Police.

Poo Chow, Sept. 25.—A large number of Americans in this city are in danger of their lives because of an incipient revolt started on Monday by the chief of police, who has defied the authority of the central government and has threatened to destroy the city in case he is attacked.

A large force of federal soldiers has been dispatched from Peking to Poo Chow. Sharp fighting is anticipated within a short time and all foreigners have been warned to gather within their own legations and help protect them from the attacks of the natives.

RIOTERS WRECK CARS

SUPERIOR, WIS., POLICE IN BATTLE WITH MOB.

Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Property Is Ruined as Sequel of Strike.

Superior, Wis., Sept. 20.—A mob of 5,000 strike sympathizers last night destroyed thousands of dollars of street railway property and seriously injured many nonunion street car employees.

The first attack on street cars resulted in the burning of six cars and a battle with the police, in which more than 30 persons were injured, none, it is thought, fatally.

Following this battle the mob stormed the company's barn on Fourth street and Ogden avenue.

The police were powerless. Sheriff Edward McKinnon was ordered to swear in deputies to preserve order and save human life.

Previous to this time every policeman on the force, specials and regulars, was enlisted on night service, but thousands of men and boys paraded the streets in wildest disorder.

The fire department was ordered ready to disperse the mob with hose.

The rioting started when a parade of striking car men and hundreds of sympathizers ended at Belknap and Tower streets. Just as the band stopped playing a car came into view from the east end and stopped at Ogden and Belknap. The sound of shattered glass was the signal for the mob to storm the car.

Stones, bricks and clubs were thrown at the conductor, motorman and policemen in the car.

U. S. MARINES ARE FIRED AT

Nicaraguan Rebels Attack American Forces Who Are on Way to Rescue Girls.

Washington, Sept. 21.—Three companies of marines with three machine guns left Managua on Thursday for Granada near where it is reported a detachment of United States sailors and marines has been fired on by General Menes's rebels and where a large number of college girls are still at the mercy of the bandit soldiery of the revolution.

The navy department has only a brief dispatch from General Pendleton, in charge of the marine forces at Managua, reciting that it was necessary to hurry the three companies and machine guns to Managua. It is reported that the first detachment sent to the rescue of Granada by Pendleton was fired on at Masaya, a point on the railroad between Managua and Granada. It is therefore assumed that the first detachment, which was commanded by Major Butler, has not reached Granada and has sent a hurry call for reinforcements.

ARMIES TIED UP BY FLYERS

Work of British Air Scouts Strengthens Theory That Aviator Will Revolutionize Warfare.

Cambridge, England, Sept. 21.—The science of aviation apparently is revolutionizing warfare. An official announcement was issued on Thursday that the army maneuvers had been abandoned, and that a military conference would be held here at once to adjudicate the results and explain the cessation of operations.

This surprising situation arose from the fact that the rival armies, numbering about fifty thousand men, had reached a sort of stalemate, owing to effective air scouting which entailed a constant change of tactics and made impossible any broad plan of action.

FAMOUS MOSQUE THAT IS IN DANGER

OUR photograph shows a street scene in front of the Mosque of St. Sophia, Constantinople, one of the most famous places of worship in the world, which, it is feared, is about to collapse due to the damage caused by a recent earthquake which shook European Turkey. The church, which measures 250 by 235 feet, was begun in the year 532 by Emperor Justinian and completed within five years. It is of brick, faced with marble and is in the form of a cross. The central dome is 180 feet high and 108 feet in diameter. After conquering Constantinople in 1453, Mohammed II. converted St. Sophia into a place for Mohammedan worship.

STILL HOLD MEETS BACKED MEXICO WAR

AMERICAN FINANCIERS SAID TO HAVE FURNISHED MONEY.

New Orleans, Sept. 21.—Charles P. Taft, Henry Clay Pierce, president of the Waters-Pierce Oil company, and representatives of the Harriman interests are charged by Juan P. Didapp, diplomatic adviser of the Mexican revolution, with having furnished the money needed to finance the revolution against Diaz to President Madero. Didapp made this allegation on Thursday before leaving for Mexico.

He said that $5,000,000 had been advanced and that the loan had been repaid with a $20,000,000 premium. Mr. Didapp added that a new junta would be formed to replace the one which has been broken up by the arrests of its members by United States officers.

The Mexican consul here has filed a complaint against all the prisoners charging violation of the United States neutrality laws. The trial will be held before United States Commissioner Griffin. Several attorneys are here to represent the defendants.

DEPUTIES ARE FIRED UPON

Striking Miners and Sheriff's Men Exchange Shots at Bingham, Utah.

Bingham, Utah, Sept. 23.—Sixty-two hundred men now compose the army of mine workers made idle by the strike in the mines here Wednesday morning, and present indications are that this number will be greatly increased unless a settlement of difficulties is brought about within the next few days.

The Greeks and Cretans, who until Wednesday afternoon were fortified in trebuches overlooking the mines, have remained true to their promise to Governor Spry to give up the stronghold, but have not relaxed their vigilance on the mines. Pickets patrolled the roads leading to the mines on Thursday night and early in the morning several shots were exchanged with deputy sheriffs who attempted to cross the highways leading into the hills.

BLAST TRIAL NEAR

HEARING OF FIFTY-ONE INDICTED MEN SOON TO TAKE PLACE AT INDIANAPOLIS.

MASS OF EVIDENCE IS READY

Ortle McManigal Is Expected to Be Principal Witness of the Government—Senator Kern to Defend Accused.

Indianapolis, Sept. 24.—On October 1 fifty-one men, who were indicted in connection with the dynamiting cases, will be placed on trial by the government. The district attorney is at work on the cases and expects to be ready by the time the cases are called. Almost the entire list of officials of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers for ten years back will appear.

The district attorney has marshaled his testimony, consisting largely of documentary evidence, in such a way as to expedite the trial as much as possible. The records and letters taken from the offices of the iron workers have been arranged in the order of their dates and in the order in which the prosecution assert the writers stand toward the conspiracy that the government charges existed in the organization to dynamite property.

John J. McNamara, the international secretary, is said to have handled all the correspondence and given practically all the instructions regarding places where explosives should be used, and the prosecution holds there is abundant evidence that the instructions were acted upon.

Letters alleged to have been written by Ryan to other members and by them to Ryan constitute an interesting part of the correspondence.

The letters, nearly 200 of which are in the possession of the government, are alleged to be from or about all the men indicted, and the government asserts it is able to trace practically every job of dynamiting to an immediate or remote connection with them. In this connection the evidence of Ortle McManigal will be very important, for it is said it will show that he received instructions in harmony with the letters, and that he carried out these instructions to the letter and received pay for them. Senator Kern has recently been employed by the defense and is now going over the indictments and is frequently in consultation with the defendants.

VANDERBILT HEIR IS BORN

Interesting Event Occurs at Betchworth, England—Infant Will Inherit $50,000,000.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 24.—A cablegram announcing the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt at Betchworth, Surrey, England, was received on Sunday by Mrs. C. Hazeltine Bashor, mother of Mrs. Vanderbilt, who was formerly Miss Marguerite Emerson. Mrs. Bashor's message was from Mr. Vanderbilt. It was brief, simply stating that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt were the parents of a fine boy and that both the mother and her child are doing well.

The Vanderbilt infant will rank with the richest children in the world and in all likelihood will become as famous as the celebrated McLean baby of Washington. It will be heir to not less than $50,000,000 and probably more.

NOTED SCIENTISTS AT MEET

Taft Welcomes Delegates to Congress of Hygiene and Demography at Washington.

Washington, Sept. 24.—One of the most interesting gatherings of scientists ever brought together in this city was called to order on Monday by Dr. Henry P. Walcott of Boston. It is the international congress of hygiene and demography and among the 2,500 delegates are some of the foremost savants of Europe as well as the leading hygienists of America.

The delegates were formally welcomed by President Taft, who has been made honorary president of the association. Mr. Taft's speech was short. He complimented the members of the congress on the past work of their organization and expressed gratification over the large and notable foreign representation that responded to the invitation to hold the meeting here. The president entertained the delegates at a garden party on the White House grounds in the afternoon.

COULDN'T HAVE DONE BETTER

Marriage Arrangement Seemed Something of a Bargain, but It Turned Out Happily.

George A. Birmingham, the widely known writer, says there is no country in the world where marriage, at least in the peasant class, is more a matter of bargaining, and yet shows a higher average of stability and content than Ireland. Sometimes the man has never seen the woman before they are brought together, the precise number of pounds, cows, or pigs to be handed over having been by that time settled.

This is illustrated in personal recollections just published by an Irish woman. She was visiting with an aunt a cottage in the neighborhood, and admired a fine mahogany chest of drawers.

"'Twas for that I was married," said the mistress of the cottage. A young farmer had also seen and admired. A bargain was struck. There was no money, but the bride was to have a couple of sheep, a yearling bullock and the chest. The prudent young man measured it, and then turned and asked:

"An' which o' thim little girls is it?" She was the oldest unmarried—"next the door," as the phrase was. "An' so I wint," she said, "and was happy ever afterwards."—Tit-Bits.

At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.

Scientists Believe There Is a Reason for Bugs

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Wilson is looking for bedbugs in his official and not his private capacity. Mr. Wilson wants all the bedbugs he can get, and furthermore he is willing to pay a fair price for them.

This is not a hobby with Tama Jim. In fact, he has no intention of ever coming in personal contact with the unpopular bipeds or quadrupeds or centipedes, whichever class they happen to belong to. Mr. Wilson wants as many of this species of the bug family as he can buy at a nickel apiece—for purely experimental purposes.

On the old Lewis farm, near Vienna, a few miles from Washington, the department of agriculture maintains an experimental farm. Every class of bugs that have any part whatsoever in farm life are being studied by the department's scientists.

In the railroad station at Vienna this sign was posted:

"WANTED—Bedbugs. Five cents will be paid for each bedbug delivered at the office of the experimental farm of the department of agriculture."

The farmers of Vienna intend to call at the farm and make sure that accommodations have been made for the safekeeping of the bugs.

Some of Uncle Sam's scientists believe there is a reason for bedbugs and if they manage to substantiate this theory they intend to put them to work at a more gratuitous task than that upon which they are generally engaged.

There is a theory that most self-respecting species of bugs will have no dealings with bedbugs—in fact, they will not live in the same neighborhood.

This theory is based upon two assumptions. The first is that bedbugs are scavengers and beat up and kill anything else that happens to cross their way in bugdom.

Now the department of agriculture's scientists have about decided which bugs do the most damage to fruit trees. These experiments have been carried on at the Lewis farms for many months. The most deadly bugs, as far as fruit is concerned, have been segregated in boxes and bottles.

The bedbugs are to be introduced to these select fruit killers and then the scientists are going to see what happens.

If the bedbugs carry off the honors Uncle Sam may try to induce them to leave their present abodes for fruit orchards.

Ah, It Was a Sad Day for "Count" Perreard

JEAN PERREARD, true son of Paris, he of the Cafe de Perreard, was disconsolate the other day.

It was the Sabbath and also the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille. And for the first time in years the "count," as he is familiarly known, failed to observe the day. The count's celebrations have been notable events in Washington for years, but the count left the day pass quietly because it fell on a Sunday.

Everything about the Chateau de Perreard was normal, except that from a window breezed the tricolor of La Belle France.

Stilled were the clinking glasses, because it was the Sabbath day. The hearty chanting of "The Marseillais," as only the count could chant it, was not wafted out into Thirteenth street from the chateau windows as in the past.

In fanciful retrospection the count recalled the celebrations of yesterday and his friends missed them. The bon vivants of the town, who call Perreard the count, recalled the trips down the river as his guests and how he used to chant the cabaret songs of dear old Paris. And all remembered how the count used to say, when asked how he would celebrate the independence day of France:

"Oh, eet will be ze grande time."

The continental Sunday has about as much chance in Washington as the count would have had in the Marathon, and so the only way the head of the house of Perreard could observe the day was to sip a little green stuff, as it filtered through a loaf of sugar. But all the time the tricolor floated in the breeze from the casement of the cafe.

The count could not have a public party, and so he had none. It was a bad day for France.

And the count was very, very sad.

Agricultural Department an Aid to Housewives

NO branch of the United States government comes so near to the life of the people as the department of agriculture, which deals with the cotton and other fibers of which our clothes are made, the flocks and herds we raise, the crops we produce, the food we eat and the timber of which our houses are built.

The closeness of the relation between the department and the people is in great measure due to the fact that the use which is made of agricultural products receives as much attention as their production, and the great bulk of these products is used in the home.

Commenting on this phase of the department's work Secretary Wilson said:

"Commercial industries were long ago studied by scientific methods, since it was found that gaining knowledge by experience was much more costly than gaining it by systematic study. It is only lately that we have come to realize that it is equally profitable to study the housekeepers' problems."

"Fifty years ago few such questions had been taken to the laboratory and few schools gave instruction in such subjects. Today very many men and women of scientific training have taken the home problem to the laboratory and are finding ways of helping the housekeeper to solve her problems satisfactorily."

"The department of agriculture has studied many questions which relate to the use of agricultural products on the farm and in the home, but perhaps none of them has a closer relation to the household than the nutrition investigations of the office of experiment stations, which have to do with the use of agricultural products as human foods and whose object is to help the housewife in her efforts to provide good living at reasonable cost, without undue labor."

Turkey Trot New? Danced 500 Years in Borneo

IT WILL be news to many doubters that the much-criticized "turkey trot" has been danced to the rain god of a savage tribe in the north of Borneo for more than five hundred years. Several young women of one of Washington's exclusive circles were astounded when Prof. Edward Davidson, a Washington dancing master, made this statement to them during a lecture on the history of dancing.

Professor Davidson said that the "trot" is one of the holy of holies in the religion of the savage Muruts. When there comes a prolonged dry spell these head-hunting natives perform the trot day in and day out until the great rain god has heard their prayers. The professor visited the north of the island several years ago. He says he saw them dance around the image of the god an entire night.

During the latter part of the eighteenth century the turkey trot was introduced into the dancing schools of Italy and Portugal, and soon everybody was doing it. In the first part of the nineteenth century it gradually died out.

"The clergy of Italy, Spain and Portugal made a loud outcry against the 'heathen dance,' but the physical culturists and dancing masters favored it on the ground that it was good exercise. In the fashionable dancing schools of Rome it was all the rage for a short time. Traces of the turkey trot can be seen in the folk dances of Switzerland, Portugal, Spain, Italy and France."

"In 1888 an Italian named Giovanni Chasini introduced the dance to San Francisco. For a time it was not appreciated much outside of Barbary Coast circles. Then it came to New York and certain prominent dancing masters introduced it into the Four Hundred."

WEDDED BY BEECHER

Wartime Romance Recalled by 50th Anniversary.

Hasty Marriage of Divinity Student Makes Deep Impression on Famous Preacher—Makes It Subject of Article.

Danbury, Conn.—A wartime marriage, performed by Henry Ward Beecher, then pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, while making a visit to Washington, Conn., was recalled by the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the wedding of the Rev. and Mrs. Horace Q. Judd, at their home in Bethel.

Mr. Judd, a retired minister of the New York East Methodist Conference, was a young divinity student at the time of his marriage, and had just enlisted for the war. His bride was Miss Ellen E. Crofut, of New Preston. The wedding was decided upon the day before Mr. Judd's regiment, the 17th Connecticut Volunteers, was to march away to the war, and the youthful soldier and his bride hastened to Washington, the nearest village to Miss Crofut's home, to find a minister.

Mr. Beecher learned of their errand and performed the ceremony. The incident so impressed the famous preacher that he made it the subject of an article that appeared in "The New York Independent" soon afterward, in which he wrote:

It was Sabbath evening, calm, soft, clear, sweet breathed, as if there had never been a sin or a sigh among these lovely hills. We wandered down to Mr. Gunn's school to find a boy of our liking, when lo! posthaste, came messengers, a wedding! A young soldier just going to the war meant to give his girl the right to come to him, should he be sick or wounded. Tomorrow he leaves. Tonight they must be married. To Mr. Frank Brinsmade's we posted.

How came it to be there? The young volunteer had got his "certificate" of the town clerk, and he had stepped across the street and told our friend that the brave soldier was hunting for a minister. Just then, in stout, coarse soldier's blue, came the man, and his flower by his side.

By one of those generous sympathies that seize good people, out ran a noble woman to invite them to stop and be married there, and as several connected families were gathered there for an evening's stinging, there were a score of maidens to greet the bride, and many men to welcome the bridegroom.

Not one had ever seen the parties or knew aught of them. It was enough that the man was going to fight for the old flag. We looked in their faces and were satisfied. The rooms were thronged. The service proceeded and closed. Then some one, unbidden, but moved to do it, began to sing, "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah," all joined. Then "America" and the "Star Spangled Banner" were added.

Flowers were brought in for the young wife—white day-lilies and geranium leaves. Little remembrances were sought out for the guests, and an enthusiasm of kindness filled the house. Thus two strangers, at twilight, came riding into town, seeking a solitary wedding, in order that on the morrow, he going to the war, she might have a right to wear his name.

They were stopped, caught out of their vehicle, borne into a refined home, surrounded with loving hearts, all delicately offering service and making them welcome, and giving them a wedding that, for glow and joy and gladness, few even of those most favored can give their children. As the young husband and wife were leaving, all gathered about the dooryard gate and sang a parting hymn.

Since the fire which threatened the master's hotel and the lives of many people Tige ran down the corridors and scratched on the doors until the guests were awakened in time to escape.

IS RUDE TO GABRIEL

Purser Ejects Him From Appropriated Stateroom.

Polished Nails and Manners of Stowaway de Luxe Falls to Win Ship's Officer—Goes into the Lazaret.

New York.—You have to hand it to Gabriel Fanches for the polish on his finger nails, his manners and his nerve. The officers of La Lorraine of the French line have handed it to him already.

Gabriel went aboard the vessel at Havre with $15 in the coin of La Belle France reposing close to the exact crease running down the right leg of his trousers, and the money was still in his pocket when La Lorraine steamed into New York harbor.

When the French equivalent for "All ashore that's going ashore" was sung out at Havre, Gabriel did not respond. By that time he had glanced over the second-class passenger list and had picked out for his own a large unoccupied stateroom.

Gabriel was one of the first at table for the first meal of the voyage, and kept up the record for several days. He was a cheerful soul, and in his search for congenial spirits acquired considerable popularity in the second cabin.

For the first few days of the trip the purser was visibly worried. Time and again he wandered about the ship, counting noses. One by one he called the second-class passengers into a private conference and quizzed them.

The last to be cross-examined was Gabriel. Every one else had been able to point out their particular name on the purser's list and show in other ways that their passage had been honorably contracted for.

"You are rude, sir," snapped Gabriel when the purser suggested that he might have neglected to purchase his passage. "You are ridiculous, too, and I must refuse to discuss this affair with you."

Without delay the purser proceeded to live up to the character given him by Gabriel. He moved the young gentleman from his comfortable stateroom to the lazaret, which is the ship's prison. And then—but not it is too horrible, it is monstrous, the act of a fiend—this rude, ridiculous purser dug up from the hold another who had started without the equivalent of a stowaway de luxe.

This person was Lucien Guillemet, a Swiss, who had worked with his hands. He was dirty from his days of intimate contact with the cargo in the bowels of the ship, and not at all debonaire. And into the lazaret they put Lucien Guillemet!

Gabriel sent an indignant message to the captain, saying that he was unused to occupying the same sleeping quarters with another, particularly one such as his present roommate. But the plg of a purser intercepted the note.

They turned both Gabriel and the Swiss, who confessed he wanted to work with his hands in the new world so badly that he had stolen a perfectly good passage from La Campagnole Trans-Atlantique over to the Ellis Island authorities.

And the mockery of it is that they will probably let the "horny-handed, plodding Swiss" have his way, while the most desirable Gabriel will return whence he came.

NO CLEW TO HISTORY

STUDENTS OF ARCHEOLOGY ALL PUZZLED OVER YUCATAN.

Art and Architecture of Once Great People Are There, but Hieroglyphics Baffle All the Knowledge of the Scientists.

Pittsburg.—Through the efforts of Henry Hornbostel, head of the building bureau of the Pittsburg Carnegie Institute of Technology, there will be in the Carnegie Institute before a great while specimens of distinctive American art and architecture, the legacy of that mysterious people who lived ages ago in America, attained a high degree of civilization, developed a beautiful and cultivated art, and then passed away, leaving only these treasures of art and architecture to tell what their civilization had been. Already Mr. Hornbostel has been instrumental in arousing the Carnegie Museum of Washington to an interest in this field and it has set aside an appropriation for exploration of the art of Yucatan. In company with Lloyd Warren, Mr. Hornbostel made a pleasure trip to Yucatan during a recent vacation, going far into the interior of the country where lies waiting a storehouse of material for students of archeology with reference to hieroglyphics as well as art and architecture. The hieroglyphics are all the more alluring because of their baffling conditions, with never a clew yet discovered to work from in deciphering their meaning, which would reveal to us the minds of the wonderful ancient inhabitants of America. The priceless heritage has lain neglected and crumbling to ruins while at the same time huge sums are being paid by our museums for replicas of works of art of the eastern hemisphere.

With the completion of the Panama canal all signs point to a vast influx of northerners into these southern states and an awakening of interest in the study of the arts. Their pottery and decorative designs are already being made use of by enterprising dealers and advertisers in all kinds of wares as souvenirs of the celebration of the opening of the great canal.

"The day will soon come," says Mr. Hornbostel, "when excursions to the ruins of Yucatan will be made as easily as to the Holy Land or to Egypt. It is now impossible for petticoats to travel into the interior of the country, as it is as wild and densely forested as the interior of Africa. Mr. Warren, myself and our guide made the journey from Merida, the capital of Yucatan, in the most primitive of wooden wagons drawn by three burros, and because of the loose construction of its wooden wheels and axles, which allow it to wobble from side to side without injury, wonderfully adapted to the rough stone roads of the country."

Two absolutely unique characteristics of the ancient people who built these ruins thousands of years ago, and of whom they and the pyramids on which many of them are built are the only trace, were noted by Mr. Hornbostel. The first is that the towns were built without walls or fortifications of any kind, there were no roads and the houses were far apart, making them indeed garden cities, and there were no beasts of burden. "This vanished race was a peaceful people," said Mr. Hornbostel, "and such architecture of a primitive race is absolutely unique in history. They had no fear of an invading army and no preparation to repulse one. They had no means of moving either an army or supplies." The second peculiarity noted by the travelers is the original form of architecture in the construction of the buildings, which are made of small stones, cut and dressed, with an original cantilever construction of arches. This structure, Mr. Hornbostel claims, he has not found anywhere else in all his study of architecture, ancient, medieval and modern.

Wife's Blood Saves Life.

Baltimore.—Harry H. Aubrey, baseball player, has the heroism of his wife, Mrs. Margaret Aubrey, and skill of Johns Hopkins hospital surgeons to thank for his life. Lying side by side on the operating table, with her artery attached to his vein in the arm, her blood flowed into the life of the man with whom she was one. For an hour the transfusion went on, until the man was considered strong enough to stand a successful operation for the removal of a tumor.

Sample of German Ingenuity.

In Germany, says the Scientific American, wood is too expensive to be burned, and it is made into artificial silk worth $2 a pound and bristles worth $4 a pound; into paper, yarn, twine, carpet, canvas and cloth. Siberian Land Threatened.

Extensive tracts of land in Siberia are threatened by the encroachment of the great Gobi desert, and a plan has now been drawn up for a series of forest ramparts to hold back the salt and drift. The only effective defense, according to the report of agronomists sent to survey the region is in tree belts at least two miles broad. It is proposed to plant one of these from Samara to the Caspian sea, while others are recommended extending in intervals of about 40 miles right up to the Chinese frontier.

HOW TERM "MUG" ORIGINATED

In the Days of Old Faces of Men Were Fitted Upon the Ale Jugs.

When you call for a draught of ale in a chop house it is served quite as often as not in a toby, a jug modeled roughly after the form of a little old man in a cocked hat. This chop house toby of today was quite probably "made in Germany," but his ancestors came from England.

Most of them belong to Staffordshire and there is not a solemn one among the lot. In the latter part of the eighteenth century and the early years of the nineteenth famous men's faces were fitted to pitchers much as nowadays the likenesses of our national characters are cast in plaster of paris and sold in the shops.

So it is that we find Wellington and Drake, General Howe and Lord Nelson, hollowed into ale mugs for the greater glory of their deeds. It has even been asserted that here originated the unhandsome term "mug" as the colloquial designation of the face.

From the collector's viewpoint there are two classes of toby: the portrait toby and the jug, which is merely a comic. The portraits may be of historic worthies or they may simulate ideal characters such as John Bull or mythical characters such as Punch or characters from fiction such as Falstaff—Country Life in America.

Algernon Grappled With It In Time—He Explains His Never Failing Remedy.

"You seem to have a cold this morning, Algernon," said Mr. Topfloor, as the elevator "boy" responded rather grudgingly to his cheerful "good morning."

Woman's Concoctions.

"When a woman prepares refreshments for a party," said a cynical person, "she takes the inside out of something and puts in it the inside of something else. Then she pours a yellow mixture over the result and its success depends upon the difficulty the guests have in telling what it was before she began fooling with it."

Her Fellow Feeling.

The children had been disobedient and troublesome, and the mother, instead of punishing them, brought them into line by telling them a pathetic story of orphans who had no home. Little Jack, in tears, rolled under the sofa to hide his grief. Mary stood out a little longer, and then called: "Come on-out, Jack; I'm crying, too."—Lippincott's.

Surpassed Them All.

A near race riot happened in a southern town. The negroes gathered in one crowd and the whites in another. The whites fired their revolvers into the air, and the negroes took to their heels. Next day a plantation owner said to one of his men: "Sam, were you in that crowd that gathered last night?" "Yassir." "Did you run like the wind, Sam?" "No sir. I didn't run like the wind, 'deed I didn't. But I passed two niggers that was running like the wind."—Pennsylvania Grit.

Smoking to Cure Deafness.

Harriet Martineau suffered from deafness. One who knew her writes: "The degree of deafness varied, and she tried all sorts of remedies. Under the advice of some scientific person she tried smoking. I had the privilege of providing her privately with some very mild cigars, and many and many a summer night have we sat together for half an hour or so in her porch at the knoll, smoking. She tried this remedy for only a few months, but she fancied it had a beneficial effect upon her hearing."

Public Taste.

"Now," the manager complained, "here is an interesting play; the star is young, beautiful, and a splendid actress; the company is a capable, well-balanced one, and the production is excellent in every respect—yet it is a failure. The people simply will not become interested in it. How do you account for it?"

"I don't account for it," replied the man with the high brow and the wrinkles which indicated that he was in the habit of thinking. "I have made a rather careful study of the public during the last few years, and if you think talent, worthiness and general excellence are to be relied upon for success in any art or profession which is compelled to depend upon public patronage it will be a waste of time to do any accounting for the failure you mention."

Raccoons Natural Thieves.

If you have raccoons in your home, keep a watchful eye on all articles within reach of the animals. They will steal anything from a pocket knife to a diamond ring. Notwithstanding the trouble necessitated by guarding against the mischievous habits of the creatures, they are members of many households. They are fond of milk, and will resort to all sorts of tricks and subterfuges to obtain it.

The Prime of Age.

"I understand that Lemuel Holland has come back to Danby to end his days," said a former resident of the village to Peter Hobbs, the stage driver. "How old is he?" "He's only 89," said Mr. Hobbs, "and I guess you've made a mistake about his ending his days here. He came home so he could get the new library started and the bank organized right up to date, and see to the drinking fountain that's to be put on the green."

"He calculates to spend a year or two with us, but he told me the other day he'd always promised his son out in California 't he'd pass the latter part of his life out there, and he's planning to go before he falls any, so's to have the full enjoyment of the trip across the country."—Youth's Companion.

A Prayer.

We receive out of the dark hand of mystery the gift of sunny days. We pledge ourselves to take them with a hearty will, and live them out to the full measure of the power of joy—yet never with a loose or temporary mind. In the moment, its we will not forget the hours, nor in the hours the years, nor in the years the complete stature of our lives, framed in eternal silence.—Max Eastman in the Twentieth Century Magazine.
